FMST 311: World Cinema after Television
Midterm Study Guide

Our midterm will be in class on October 15 (Wednesday). Review the films, your notes, the slides on Blackboard, and the readings. The midterm will be handwritten. If you have accommodations, please contact the Testing Center

Part I: Clip Identification
Identify four clips from films we watched in full in this class. While the specific questions you will be asked to address will vary depending on the clip, you should be prepared to provide:

- The title of the film and the name of the filmmaker
- Studio, country, and year of release
- Artistic movement or film era with which the film is associated
- Information about the significance of the film to film history. In other words: why and how we and/or the scholars whose works we have read discuss this film (this is where the specific questions for each clip may differ)

Part II: Key Terms and People
10 of the following terms will appear on the midterm. Be prepared to identify eight, explain their significance in the context of the course, and provide any other required information.

Part III: Film History and Theory

A. Write 8-10 sentences in response to one of the three prompts discussing

a. Neo-realism
b. French New Wave
c. New Hollywood

For each of these periods and/or movements you should be able to discuss

- Specific production / distribution / screening practices and patterns
- Nations / centers of production & distribution
- Major practitioners and films
- Dominant narrative/stylistic/formal features
- Political / social / artistic influences on cinema of the time
- Specific examples from the films in this course

B. Write 8-10 sentences in response to one of the two prompts discussing

a. "Art cinema" as defined by David Bordwell in his article
b. "Third cinema" as described by Fernando Solanas and Octavio Getino

For each of these you should be able to

- discuss the term
- describe specific production/distribution/screening practices associated with the trend
- name major practitioners and films
- discuss dominant features (narrative, stylistic, political) of this trend
- and provide specific examples from the films in this course.
